Lewis County Emergency Management Scaling Down

As we near the June 30th date of the Governors proposed re-opening of the State of Washington, Lewis County Emergency Management is stepping back to a Level 1 response where we will continue to monitor the COVID-19 response, as well as other potential emergencies. We will continue addressing any logistical needs requested within the county as they come up.

Lewis County Public Health and Social Services is still actively responding to the COVID-19 response and if there are any questions, or you would like more information on the current situation, please visit:

It has been quite an experience the last year and a half, but the lessons learned during this response have been invaluable. We want to thank everyone for their continued support to our community. If there are any significant changes to the COVID-19 response, or future responses not related to COVID-19 we will update you with a new situation summary.

Thank you Lewis County!
